At the Market

Attah and Fafali visited the market in their community Saturday after early morning classes at school. In the market, they saw people selling and others buying. There were many people who parked their cars in the parking arena. Fafali and Attah shared with their friends all the things they saw at the market.

“I saw varieties of fruits, vegetables, fishes and many other materials,” said Fafali.

“I remembered lessons on a noun as a naming word.”

Attah responded, “I saw many of the examples of all the items we learnt in class. The fruits include mangoes, pawpaw, oranges, pears and tangerines. The vegetables include okra, pepper, onions, cucumber and many more. We saw all the negotiation processes and all the monetary exchanges going on in the market.”
Name 3 nouns that are names of fruits mentioned in the story.

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

Name 3 nouns that are vegetables mentioned in the story.

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

Name 3 nouns describing things you would find in your neighborhood market.

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________